Art & Design in Our Lives

FAMOUS DESIGNERS AND PHOTOGRAPHERS

PORTUGAL

Karl Lagerfeld

Photographer & fashion designer

Karl Lagerfeld is One of the most acclaimed fashion designers in the world, known for his bold designs and constant reinvention.

He is also a photographer, publisher, designer, and film director.

He was born in September 1933 in Hamburg, Germany. During World War II, his family moved to a rural area where he was mainly shielded from the deprivations of World War II due to his father's business interests in Germany.

From an early age, Lagerfeld expressed an interest in design and fashion, making the bold decision of moving to Paris when he was only 14. There he finished his secondary school at the Lycée Montaigne, where he majored in drawing and history.

By the age of 17 he entered a design

Within a year, he was successfully working for a number of top fashion houses, like Jean Patou, Fendi and Chloé

In 1983 he joined Chanel, bringing what was perceived to be a near-dead brand back to life with a revamped popular ready-to-wear fashion line.

Addressed by the Vogue Magazine as the 'unparalleled interpreter of the mood of the moment' Lagerfeld has proven himself to be an immensely talented and skilful designer, whose creations are always innovative.

In the late 1970's Karl Lagerfeld began to explore his photography skills when he was appointed artistic director of Chanel to do the printing press kits which had to be published days before the collection was finished. In 1976 he published his first book "The Allure of Chanel" with his illustrations. The book goes inside the designer's mind. Karl has published multiple books such as "The house in the trees" (1998), "A Portrait of Dorian Gray" (2004), "Casa Malaparte" (1998), "The Glory of Water: Daguerrotypes" (2013).

For Karl, modern photographs touch him personally because they are from his time. He cannot compare photography with painting because both of them are art but both are distinct. "Early twentieth century photographers are as good as Monet and other painters in a certain way-but one should never compare- it's like [comparing] sculpture and painting- it's something else."

To sum up, his work is more focused on fashion and design but he still has a passion for photography which is always interacting with his daily life and work.

František Drtikol was a Czech photographer of international renown. He is especially known for his characteristically epic photographs, often nudes and portraits. Drtikol made many portraits of very important people. He began using paper cut-outs in a period he called „photopurism“. These photographs resembled silhouettes of the human form. Later he gave up photography and concentrated on painting. After the studio was sold Drtikol focused mainly on painting, Buddhist religious and philosophical systems. In the final stage of his photographic work Drtikol created compositions of little carved figures, with elongated shapes, symbolically expressing various themes from Buddhism. In the 1920s and 1930s, he received significant awards at international photo salons. He died 13. January 1961 in the age of nearly 78 years.

Josef Koudelka

The Czech photographer born in 1938 became famous thanks to year '68. He was photographing when The Russian tanks came. He takes photos of interesting moments of life, nature or gypsies. His pictures seems to me curious and attractive. I find them interesting on every shot.

The photos left a sign of the past. I can think about what was happening in that time. It gives me space to understand the moment. It shows me the destiny of people, mood of the world and lots of stories.

The photographs of tanks, or soldiers give me memories which I don't have but can feel them. I'm seeing their desire to live, their fear or instant of happiness. I think shoots like these are precious.

Photos which are not just documentary. They have a heart. A power to show us something we haven't seen yet. Something that is worth to remind.

It forces me to feel that may I would like to be there because of some magic. Which makes it beautiful and getting into my head. Probably power of past and skill of the photographer gives a life to the pictures.

I love his work with light and composition but the atmosphere.. it leaves impression of rarity in ordinariness. It may have happened for him to take that.
